St. John's, NL, Tuesday, September 21, 2022 – Business & Arts NL announced the launch of a new public engagement campaign pilot project this week.

Supported by Canadian Heritage, and the Government of Newfoundland and Labrador, Department of Industry, Energy and Technology, the campaign focuses on reintroducing people to 'The Art of Going Out' to events, using a mix of digital, print, out-of-home, and video channels. The goal of the campaign is to drive attendance and engagement at arts events in St. John's this fall.

The campaign, developed in collaboration with Ray Agency, builds on the insight that following over two years without in-person events, going out has become an art form in and of itself.

Additionally, the pilot project works to build collaboration in the arts community. In total, ten St. John's-based arts organizations were identified to take part in the initial pilot project following a call for participants by Business & Arts NL. The intention is to expand to additional arts organizations and regions in the future.

Events by participants are happening throughout the fall across St. John's.

"Working with professional artists and cultural organizations in Newfoundland and Labrador to maximize their contribution to the economy is important to our government. This exciting collaboration is a wonderful opportunity to further connect the arts community, and attract even more patrons to events, festivals, and other programming."

– Honourable Andrew Parsons, Minister of Industry, Energy and Technology

Noreen Golfman, Co-Chair – "We also want to remind people that this isn't just about a night out, this is about creating memories that will last a lifetime."
